

ABOUT THE AUTHORS

DR FEMAN RENE M AUTAJAY is a Medical Specialist IV, Department of Health Representative to the Antique Provincial Health Board, and Antique Provincial Health Team Leader of the Center for Health Development No. 6, Iloilo City. He finished his MD at the West Visayas State University College of Medicine in 1992 and recently earned his Master of Hospital Administration degree at the UP Manila College of Public Health where he was president of his batch. With his newfound knowledge and newly acquired skills, he is passionately embarking on programs and projects to improve the health care delivery system in Antique with the full support of the provincial governor, Hon. Salvacion Zaldivar Perez.

NICETO S POBLADOR has taught at the University of the Philippines for a cumulative period of over thirty years, and has had teaching stints at the National University of Singapore and the City University of Hong Kong. His main research interests are in the fields of organization analysis and applied microeconomics. He has published extensively in these areas both here and abroad. His more recent works are in the areas of public-sector governance and the economics of strategy. Since he took early retirement from the University of the Philippines in 1998, Dr. Poblador has been active in the lecture circuit and has been publishing extensively in both academic journals and the popular press. He is currently completing a manuscript on a book provisionally titled Contemporary Issues in Administration: Selected Essays.

NYMIA PIMENTEL SIMBULAN is an associate professor of sociology at the College of Arts and Sciences, University of the Philippines Manila and a doctor of public health (Dr PH). She has undertaken research and published articles on topics like sexually transmitted infections, HIV/AIDS and women prisoners, health and globalization, health and human rights, the Philippine health care system including health care financing and patients' rights. Since the early 1990s, Dr. Simbulan has been actively involved in the human rights movement in the country. She is currently the Executive Director of the Philippine Human Rights Information Center (PhilRights), an institute engaged in human rights research and information dissemination activities on various human rights issues. She is also the co-chairperson of the Medical Action Group, Inc. (MAG), a human rights NGO committed to the promotion of the people's right to health and engaged in the delivery of health services to victims of human rights violations in the country.

DR. FERNANDO M SISON is an Associate Professor in the Department of Health Policy and Administration of the UP Manila College of Public Health. He is also an affiliate faculty of the UP Manila Open University (Distance Education Program). Dr. Sison teaches Health Care Finance and Accounting, Economics of Health, Cost Benefit Analysis and Hospital Information System. He obtained his BSBA and MD degrees from the University of the Philippines and pursued his Masteral studies (health planning and economic development) at the University of Michigan School of Public Health, Ann Arbor, Michigan, USA.

CRISLINE G TORRES is an assistant professor at the Department of Political Science, University of the Philippines-Diliman. Aside from this Public Policy paper, she has written two more works on the presidential-parliamentary debate in the Philippines. The first is a more extensive research paper funded by and submitted to the UP-CIDS entitled "A Review of the Pro-Parliamentary Critique of the Presidential Form of Government of the 1987 Philippine Constitution." In it, she surveys and criticizes eight major arguments of the pro-parliamentary position in the Philippines by marshaling the comparative constitutional design scholarship critical of the pro-parliamentary position. The second is a forthcoming article in the Philippine Political Science Journal which critically reviews the argument raised by Filipino parliamentary advocates that the parliamentary system is superior to the presidential system in promoting a more efficient and harmonious executive-legislative relations.